A Slice of History

"Rhubarb was one of many fruits grown in the Amana Colonies during the Communal Era. The variety grown was a larger one, growing up to 5 feet tall and was used for both pies & fruit dishes as well as for wines. For fruit dishes, rhubarb stalks were simply chopped, but for wine the rhubarb was processed using a special device which crushed the stalks, draining the juices into receptacles to make rhubarb wine, or piestengel."

-Gardening the Amana Way, Larry Rettig

Pick up your own copy of Gardening the Amana Way or an Amana Colonies cookbook full of classic rhubarb recipes at the Amana Heritage Museum or the High Amana General Store.
